DIVISION ENGINEER REPORT

Mr. Bill Tyner presented a report titled - Economic Aspect of Supplemental Supplies to Mainstream Ditches Below Pueblo Reservoir. The presentation built on information that was presented at the February 2021 SECWCD Meeting related to the value of supplemental irrigation supplies in the lower Arkansas Valley.

A question following the February presentation is "What is the economic value of supplemental water supply for gross farm revenues?" In order to arrive at a reasonable estimate for this purpose the prior data on diversion amounts per ditch was put to use along with the crop percentages by ditch used in the H-I Model over the past five-year period. The revenue values were derived for each of four comparison ditches by utilizing recent crop yield and price data and generating a weighted gross revenue value per acre for each of the four ditches evaluated.

Both the Bessemer Canal and Catlin Canal are interesting in terms of the slightly higher percentage of vegetable crops as compared to other ditches. A variety of vegetables are grown under the Bessemer Canal with chili peppers, sweet corn, and onions being prominent. Catlin Canal's vegetable contribution is dominated a little more by the world-famous Rocky Ford melons including cantaloupe, watermelons and honeydew melons. Catlin Canal also has a fairly dominant alfalfa hay production.

The Rocky Ford Highline Canal and Fort Lyon Canal have relatively small amounts of vegetable acre and are more predominant in alfalfa hay and other hay, corn and grains. During drought years the percentage of corn drops off and hay and grains pick up. Hay production yield was measured in tons per acre and the pricing was in dollars per ton. Corn and grain yields are predominantly in bushels per acre with pricing in dollars per bushel. Corn silage is in tons per acre with pricing in dollars per ton. Vegetables can be priced by the bushel (peppers), 100# weight (onions) or box (cantaloupe). Data is a bit more sparse for vegetable production and revenue.

The unit cost of gross revenue per acre is influenced by vegetable production since both the revenue per acre and the unit input per acre are considerably higher for vegetable crops than for the more traditional feed crops like alfalfa, corn and grain. These charts show the unit cost for 2020 utilizing yield and cost data. The weighted gross revenue per acre is based on the five-year average crop percentages from the H-I Model data.

The Highline Canal and Fort Lyon Canal have a smaller gross revenue per acre largely due to very low percentages of vegetable crops.

The revenue by source of water is derived utilizing the data presented in February which showed the percentage of headgate water delivered by type. This slide pulls together that data with the actual number of acres irrigated in 2020 for the Bessemer Ditch and estimates the relative contribution of each type of supply in acres and total gross revenue using the weighted unit cost per acre from the prior slides.

STATE LEGISLATION UPDATE

Mr. Lee Miller provided a report updating the participation in the Colorado Water Congress State Affairs Committee (CWC), which meets most Mondays during the legislative session. Legislators have always been invited to participate in the discussion of water-related legislation during these meetings. Since 2015, the legislator who most consistently attended Committee meetings was Representative Jenni Arndt. On Tuesday, April 6, 2021, Representative Arndt, who is currently the Chair of the House Agriculture, Livestock and Water Committee, was elected mayor of the city of Fort Collins. Representative Arndt will leave her position as a State Representative the day following the Board meeting. A committee will be formed to select a Democrat to fill Arndt's seat for the remainder of her term.

As discussed during last month's Board meeting, for the second time in less than a year, Water Quality Control Division (WQCD) officials plan to ask lawmakers to fast-track permitting authority to address the "dredge and fill" of waters that would no longer be covered by federal permitting requirements. Last May Colorado Attorney General Phil Weiser sued the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and won a temporary injunction against the new rules, which would have taken effect in June 2020. A federal appeals court overturned that decision last month. As a result, the rules are set to take effect in Colorado April 23, 2021. Though many expect the Biden Administration to alter the new rules, once again, state health officials say new legislation is needed to ensure the state has the permitting authority and the funds needed to protect streams.

The WQCD is holding work group sessions and seeking public comment on a proposed bill that is likely to be introduced in the next two weeks, officials said. The District has asked Burns Figa and Will to participate in the work group sessions and to evaluate any bill introduced because of their expertise in participating in the federal appeals court case on behalf of the CWC.

For information on the status of other water bills of interest, please see <https://www.cowatercongress.org/state-issues.html>. If you have questions regarding any bill or proposal, please let Lee know and he will do his best to address your questions.

COLORADO RIVER ISSUES STATUS

Mr. Lee Miller presented a report providing information on the Upper Colorado River Endangered Fish Recovery Program. The District participates as an Executive Committee Member of the Colorado Water Congress' Colorado River special project that provides water user input into the activities related to the Program. The information attached is the same material that has been provided to Congressional staff working on the Program. In addition, we recommend viewing a video of the 2017 Colorado Water Congress Annual Convention, where Tom Chart provides an update on the Upper Colorado River Endangered Fish Recovery Program. That video can be accessed at <https://www.cowatercongress.org/endangered-species.html>.
